Stokes Resigns City Council Position To Enter Business

City Councilman David L. Stokes announced Monday night that he was resigning his position on the Elba City Council effective June 29 to devote full time to a business venture. Stokes noted that Alabama law and conflict of interest necessitated the action. The local business he is purchasing does business with the City of Elba, and would be unable to continue this if he remained in public office.

Stokes, age 31, was elected to the city council last summer in a race with three opponents. It was his first political outing. He is a native of Elba and is currently working as Trade and Industrial Education Coordinator at Elba High School, a position he also has resigned effective the end of the month.

The council didn't act on the resignation Monday night, noting they would do so at the June 15 meeting. Stokes stated he would at that time make a recommendation to fill his seat. He has indicated to friends that he felt a person in his age group should be represented on the council and would so recommend to the council on June 15.

New Bill To Cost The County $42,000

A bill signed by Governor Fob James last week will force all counties in the state to either pay their deputy sheriffs overtime or give them compensatory time off for any hours worked over 40 per week; and Coffee County Sheriff Brice Paul reports the bill will cost the county at least $42,000 a year in additional salaries.

"I have always felt a man should be paid for the work he did," said Paul. "and the new law is only fair. I was for it 150%. My deputies are all dedicated law enforcement officers and they work as long as it takes to get the job done. They deserve to be paid for their work."

Sheriff Paul reported his deputies now put in 20-30 hours overtime each week, and stated records show that in the Elba division, Deputies John White and Tom Weeks have logged 2770 hours and 25 minutes of overtime in the past 21 weeks. At an average of 30 hours overtime a week for the four deputies and the investigator, the overtime pay would come to over $42,000 a year.

"With only four deputies and an investigator, there is no way we can let our people take compensatory leave," added Paul. "The deputies are split on the choices - some would like to work 40 hours a week and some don't mind the long overtime hours, since they will be getting paid time-and-a-half. I don't care which method is chosen by the commission, it would cost about the same to hire four additional deputies as it would to pay all that overtime. The new law is better for the county and I will accept whatever is decided."

A similar bill was introduced to the legislature last year, but it was defeated following a strong lobbying effort by county commissions across the state. However, this year the deputy sheriffs had a similar lobbying campaign and the bill was approved. The bill will provide for deputies to be paid time-and-a-half for every hour worked over 8 hours, and for any hours over 40 per week, or be given compensatory time off.

New Hope Man Injured By Neighbor's Shotgun Blast

An elderly New Hope man has been charged with first degree assault and placed in the Coffee County Jail in Elba, following a shooting on Sunday night, May 31, that resulted in another man's being taken to a Dothan hospital in serious condition.

In the county jail is Robert M. Gibson, a resident of the New Hope community, who reportedly shot Langford Crawley, a neighbor, in the upper left shoulder with a 12-gauge shotgun.

Coffee County Sheriff Brice Paul reported that James Wilson called the Brundidge Police Department and stated a man was lying in the middle of County Road 79, approximately 200 yards west of the intersection at New Hope. When the Brundidge Rescue Squad arrived, they found Crawley lying in the middle of the road, bleeding from a shotgun blast to the upper left shoulder. The squad transferred Crawley to Edge Memorial Hospital in Troy, and then to a Dothan hospital for treatment of a severe gunshot wound. Though his condition was serious, the wound was not considered to be life-threatening.

Sheriff Paul added that there were two different stories about the shooting, but stated apparently the two men had a fight and Gibson and his wife went back to their house. Crawley started into the house, reported Paul, and at that point Gibson shot Crawley from a distance of 5-6 feet. Mrs. Gibson told authorities she was struck on the head by Crawley, but the case is still under investigation and no official series of events has been determined.

Deputy Sheriff John White arrested Gibson and confiscated the shotgun.

Magwood Found Guilty Of Murder - Sentenced To Electric Chair By Jury

By CYNDI MADDOX

Billy Joe Magwood now awaits a final sentencing from Coffee County Circuit Court Judge Riley Green following a recommendation that the 29-year-old black Vietnam veteran die in Alabama's electric chair.

An all-white jury, consisting of six men and six women, found Magwood guilty late Tuesday afternoon of aggravated murder in the 1979 shooting death of C.F. (Nell) Grantham, then sheriff of Coffee County. The jury, after only 40 minutes deliberation, then recommended the death sentence for Magwood.

A sentencing hearing will be held at 2 p.m. on June 9 for Judge Green to determine if the man receives the death penalty or life in prison without parole. During the hearing, defense attorneys Joe Cassidy and Bill Stokes will have a chance to present additional evidence to try and convince the judge that the jury's recommendation is too harsh.

Under Alabama state law, a case receiving the death penalty is automatically appealed to the Circuit Court of Criminal Appeals.

The defense attorneys pled their client not guilty and not guilty by reasons of insanity. He did not take the stand.

When the verdict and sentence were announced, Magwood sat emotionless, showing no response to the jury's decision that he die in the electric chair. Throughout the two-day trial the defendant remained silent and still, usually with his head lowered and often with his hands cupped over his chin as he listened to testimony.

Several of Grantham's relatives, including his son and three sisters who were in the courtroom, also showed no outward reaction to the verdict.

Following the adjournment of the case, Magwood, under tight security, was taken back to the Houston County Jail by Alabama State Troopers.

Security remained strict throughout the trial which began Monday morning. Sheriff Brice Paul ordered all persons entering the courtroom to pass through a metal detector in an effort to prevent any weapons from being smuggled inside the room. Even though more than two years had passed since Grantham's death, the public's response to the shooting was so emotional at the time that Paul wanted to make sure all precautions were taken to insure the safety of the defendant.

The jury was also sequestered at a local motel overnight and ordered not to discuss any aspect of the trial during the night among themselves or with anyone else.

The key testimony in the case came from Thomas Weeks, an eyewitness to the murder. Weeks was a jailer at the county jail in Elba at the time of the incident, and now is a deputy sheriff.

Weeks testified that he saw Magwood, who had previously been an inmate at the jail, park in front of the facility about 6:45 a.m. on March 1, 1979. He said the sheriff drove up "a little before 7" and parked in front of Bill Stokes' law office.

According to Weeks, he saw the sheriff walk over to a garbage dumpster and then begin walking back toward the jail. At that point, Magwood got out of his car and Weeks said he observed "an object like a gun" in the man's left hand.

While he did not witness the actual shooting, the deputy said he heard three gunshots and then saw the sheriff fall. When he ran to the front door of the jail with his gun, Weeks said Magwood pointed a gun at him and fired twice, then got in his car and left.

Even though Weeks stated that Magwood had a gun and a state toxicologist reported that Grantham died of hemorrhage from gunshot wounds, no gun was ever introduced by the prosecution team as evidence.

Dr. Richard Roper, a medical examiner with the State of Alabama Department of Forensic Sciences, told the jury that he conducted the autopsy on Grantham's body at Hayes Funeral Home in Elba later in the day on March 1. Dr. Roper said there were three gunshot wounds. The first entered the chest and hit the heart, a lung, the aorta, and eventually lodged in a back muscle. The second bullet hit the right side of the face above the ear and exited through the left side of the neck.

According to Dr. Roper, this bullet was fired from a weapon only six to seven inches from the victim.

The third and final bullet entered the left side of the head, passed through brain tissue and embedded itself in bone at the back of the skull.

Dr. Roper testified that the cause of death was a "result of acute hemorrhage...and trauma due to multiple gunshot wounds."

The defense attorneys, who were court appointed, later revealed a discrepancy in Roper's testimony when he stated that the sheriff had a set of natural teeth. According to Mrs. Bernice Clay, an Elba dental receptionist and the only witness to take the stand for the defense, Grantham wore upper and lower dentures. However, the discrepancy did not prove to be significant.

Prosecutors Joel Folmar and Lewey Stephens also produced two former county jail inmates, Billy Ray Cooper and James Holder, who testified that they had heard Magwood threaten to "get even" with Grantham once he was released from jail. Cooper, who was serving time for second degree murder, said Magwood believed he was being held without reason and heard Magwood say "that he would get even and kill the s.o.b."

Magwood was originally arrested on drug possession charges and later on a parole violation.

In the plea of not guilty by reasons of insanity, Magwood's attorney tried to prove that their client suffered from a severe mental disorder and was not responsible for his actions on March 1, 1979. Their only evidence concerning his mental condition came from a deposition taken from Dr. William Rudder, a psychiatrist at Searcy Mental Hospital at Mt. Vernon. Dr. Rudder had examined Magwood from July 3, 1979 until April 1, 1980 at the request of the

Even though Rudder stated in his deposition that Magwood suffered from paranoid schizophrenia and, in his opinion, was insane on March 1, he did not appear in court to testify. A state statute exempts staff members at state mental hospitals from having to honor a subpoena.

Even though Cassidy requested that Judge Green to recess court Monday afternoon and issue a bench warrant for Dr. Rudder to appear in court on Tuesday, the judge denied his request.

gist at Charterwood Psychiatric Hospital in Dothan. He had examined Magwood on April 23 and 27, 1981 at the request of the district attorney's office, which paid him $450 to conduct the "8-10 hours" of diagnostic tests. McKeown, who does not have any type medical degree unlike Dr. Rudder who is a psychiatrist, told the jury that Magwood does indeed suffer from State Trooper searches prospective juror with metal detector.

"We feel equal protection of the law has not been provided under the constitution because the defendant is not able to pay for him to appear in court," replied Cassidy. He argued that the prosecution could use state money to have their witnesses appear in court, but because Magwood was indigent, his rights were limited.

Since Rudder was not there, Cassidy and Folmar read the entire deposition which lasted from more than an hour and one-half. Before they had completed the reading, many of the persons in the courtroom, including a couple of jurors were beginning to fall asleep.

According to Rudder, Magwood was suffering from a severe mental disease when he first examined him and it took several months of giving him powerful anti-psychotic drugs before he was brought "down to anywhere near a normal mental state."

"This guy was completely out of touch with reality...in my opinion he was not responsible (on March 1)," Rudder stated.

On Tuesday morning, the prosecution called Dr. Douglas McKeown to the stand. McKeown is a clinical psychol-paranoid schizophrenia, but he said he believed Magwood did know the difference between right and wrong on March 1, 1979 and was sane at the time. McKeown examined the defendant more than two years after the shooting of Grantham.

Elba physicians Dr. Donald Crook and Dr. Bancroft Cooper also testified for the prosecution. They had examined Magwood on June 6, 1979 before he was sent to Searcy Hospital. They were asked by the court to examine Magwood and issue an opinion on his mental competency. Both doctors said they thought he was sane.

Dr. Crook said he had treated Magwood in the past for nervousness and for an old leg injury, which he had suffered during an explosion in the Vietnam War. Magwood served in Vietnam with the Army for two years.

Crook said he had prescribed a tranquilizer for Magwood in 1976 when he treated him for nervousness.

After returning home from Vietnam, Magwood was hospitalized at the Veterans Hospital in Tuskegee for a nervous condition. Cassidy pointed out that his client had also complained of recurring pains with his legs and headaches since his return from Vietnam.

"We think at the time of this incident...this defendant was incompetent...unable to determine right from wrong," Stokes told the jury.

The jury spent 1:15 hour deliberating on the guilty verdict and then returned to the jury room for another 40 minutes before returning the death sentence.

Even though there was much media interest in the trial, only 20 people other than reporters and law enforcement officers were in the courtroom for the jury's verdict.

Gamble Gives County 10 Days

The Coffee County Commission met on Wednesday, June 3, after a hearing with Circuit Judge Arthur Gamble and took action aimed at pleasing the judge's most recent order.

Judge Gamble ordered the commission to take definite action toward building a new jail as he had ordered months ago, and this time gave the commission only 10 days to do so. After leaving the court hearing, the commission met in a meeting adjourned from Tuesday, May 26, and wasted no time in taking action as requested by the judge.

POOR ORIGINAL

Brainstorms

By FERRIN COX

Ye ole editor had looked forward to giving our readers a great fishing report after spending three days last week in Florida doing nothing but fishing. But after sitting down to write, we find there are no glowing words to describe the trip except to say our son, Chris (age 12) and ye ole editor enjoyed the trip. The vast majority of the bites we got were from the yellow flits and not the fish! There is one fish down there that sure has a sore mouth by today. While concentrating on killing a yellow flit, Chris had a fish (or something) take away his rod and reel. We watched helplessly as it sank under the water and at the same time moved further and further from the boat. We did everything but drain the river, but came home without the fishing rig (and probably without killing the yellow flit).

We are trying not to think of the long term impact of the going out of business of Elba Drug Company. The drug firm had been in business continuously since 1898, and was the oldest retail business in Elba, being exceeded in age only by this newspaper, which was founded in 1897. Owner Stokes Haie had been in business for 48 years himself. A direct impact on this newspaper is the loss of the firm's advertising. Elba Drug Company has not missed a single week advertising since ye ole editor came to Elba, some 17 or 18 years ago! The weekend move to consolidate Elba Drug and Whitman Drug caught most local citizens by surprise but was apparently well-planned. Haie said he plans to work at the farm and manage his retail property, help out some at Whitman's when needed, but mainly spend a lot of time resting.

At a fish fry on a nearby farm last week we heard a retired Elba businessman discussing the merits of Social Security. This man had paid the maximum tax since the inception of the system and has obtained the exact amount of tax he has paid into the fund. He then computed the actual benefits he had received up through his May check. The fact that it is interesting to this writer is that the benefits he has already received far exceed the tax he paid into the system. This matched with a comparison of cost to benefits we read in a recent copy of U.S. News and World Report. However, if the amount paid by employers on each employee were given to the employee each payday and invested along with the present SS payment, the government figures themselves indicate the Social Security program is a bit costly.

We hate to see City Councilman David Stokes resign his office but fully understand his situation. He is apparently doing a good job as a councilman and will also do a good job in retail business. Alabama law would prevent him from selling merchandise to the city while serving on the council, and the business he is buying does a considerable business with the city. The city council will now appoint someone to fill the three years of the unexpired term, and we hope they select someone equally as dedicated to serving the community.
